

A DREAM OF ROSES

PATRICIA'S DREAM

Many moons and what seems like a lifetime ago, I had been seeing a man who was married, but separated. I had a dream that I was walking through their home and in each room there was a vase of red roses, three roses to a vase. Every room had one! I felt that this must be a significant dream so when I saw the man in question a couple of days later, I asked, "What's with the roses in vases all over your home?" thinking that I was just recounting a dream without a basis in reality. He looked stunned and said that it was recently his wife's birthday and he'd bought her a bouquet of roses. She responded by separating the bunch into groups of three that she then placed in various rooms in the house as a memorial to their marriage.

For me, the dream was a wake up call that I could no longer countenance a relationship that was causing anguish to another woman. Beyond that, the fact that I actually seemed to be in the house was startling - I was made to see what I had created.
